Refinance Transactions	Texas 50(a)(6) Refinance                      There are important differences between transactions that are considered a cash-out by Fannie Mae and not a cash-out by Texas law. Only those loans meeting the definition of a Texas 50(a)(6) transaction must meet the additional state requirements. However, certain transactions which are not considered a Texas 50(a)(6) under the Texas law are considered a cash-out for Fannie Mae purposes. Conversely, transactions that are considered a Texas 50(a)(6) may not be considered a cash-out for Fannie Mae. These include: <table border="1"> <thead> <tr> <th>Transaction Type</th> <th>Texas Home Equity</th> <th>Fannie Mae Cash-Out</th> </tr> </thead> <tbody> <tr> <td>Refinance with cash to the borrower(s) to pay taxes on the homestead property.</td> <td>No</td> <td>Yes</td> </tr> <tr> <td>Refinance to buy out the equity of an ex-spouse in a divorce, as a result of a court order.
